BIOGRAPHY

JEREMY D. SLATER is a sound artist essentially, but also works with video and sound in performance and installation settings. He uses his laptop compute to create a variety of sound, image, and interactive work. His sound work consists of field recordings as a base to create processed drones with tabletop guitar, objects, and ambient noise. Performances include live performed video that is ambient and reactive. Video work also includes single and multiple channel videos for screening and installations with sound and ephemeral sculpture. Jeremy was one of the 1999 recipients of the Computer Art Fellowship from New York Foundation of the Arts (NYFA) and has exhibited and performed nationally and internationally.
